

About the Editor

Blaise Cronin is the Rudy Professor of Information Science at Indiana University, Bloomington, where he has been Dean of the School of Library and Information Science since 1991. He is concurrently the Talis Information Visiting Professor of Information Science in the Department of Information and Communication at the Manchester Metropolitan University and also Visiting Professor in the School of Computing at Napier University, Edinburgh. From 1985 to 1991 he was Professor of Information Science and Head of the Department of Information Science at the Strathclyde University Business School in Glasgow.

Professor Cronin is the author of numerous research articles, monographs, technical reports, conference papers, and other publications. Much of his research focuses on scholarly communication, citation analysis, and cybermetrics—the intersection of information science and social studies of science. He has also published extensively on topics such as information warfare, information and knowledge management, marketing, and strategic intelligence. Professor Cronin was founding editor of the Journal of Economic & Social Intelligence, and sits on many editorial boards, including Journal of Documentation, Scientometrics, Cybermetrics, Library Quarterly, and International Journal of Information Management. He has considerable international experience, having taught, conducted research, or consulted in more than thirty countries: Clients have included the World Bank, Asian Development Bank, Unesco, Brazilian Ministry of Science & Technology, European Commission, British Council, Her Majesty's Treasury, Hewlett-Packard Ltd., British Library, Commonwealth Agricultural Bureaux, and Association for Information Management. Over the years, he has been a keynote or invited speaker at scores of conferences, nationally and internationally. Professor Cronin was a founding director of Crossaig, an electronic publishing start-up in Scotland, which was acquired in 1992 by ISI (Institute for Scientific Information) in Philadelphia. For six years he was a member of ISI's strategic advisory board.

Professor Cronin was educated at Trinity College Dublin (M.A.) and the Queen's University of Belfast (Ph.D., D.S.Sc.). In 1997, he was awarded the degree Doctor of Letters (D.Litt., honoris causa) by Queen Margaret University College, Edinburgh for his scholarly contributions to information science.

About the Associate Editor

Debora Shaw is an associate professor and associate dean at the School of Library and Information Science, Indiana University, Bloomington. Her research focuses on information organization, information seeking and use, and patterns of publication. Her work has been published in the Journal of the American Society for Information Science, the Journal of Documentation, Online Review, and First Monday, among others. She serves on the editorial boards of the Journal of Educational Resources in Computing and Library and Information Science Research.

Dr. Shaw served as President of the American Society for Information Science and Technology (1997), and has also served on the Society's Board of Directors. She has been affiliated with ARIST as both a chapter author and as indexer over the past fifteen years. Dr. Shaw received bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Michigan and a Ph.D. from Indiana University. She was on the faculty at the University of Illinois before joining Indiana University.